A MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Friends,

2021 was another really challenging year. As I write this letter, it's been more than 6 months since our entire team has been together, in person - which is something we've only done once in the past 2 years. For those of you who know me well, you know that I thrive on social interactions and the energy that exists by being in the room with passionate and creative individuals. While the passion and creativity are certainly still there, we are still finding our way in this new remote world - hoping desperately that it will soon be safe again to share space with our colleagues, partners, and incredible supporters. Vaccinated, boosted, and having led a partner event in the fall, I'm beginning to feel optimistic.

If 2020 was a year of survival, 2021 was a year of rebuilding. We restructured our team, and I am proud to say we are now firing on all cylinders! Through the generous support of many partners, foundations, and donors, we've expanded our programs to help meet the growing need. We launched a fresh food recovery program, which helped recover and deliver more than 703,500 lbs of fresh produce to food banks and pantries across the nation. We grew our educational content and workshops to help more people empathize with those struggling with food insecurity. Our Multifamily Program nearly tripled in size, engaging more than 600,000 apartment units around the issues of hunger and food waste. We created more virtual team building opportunities to meet the new, remote workforce where they are - at home - while finding unique ways to engage the communities they serve. We also looked inward, participating in our first Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion training as an organization, which is something we will continue in 2022.

Today, 42 million Americans, and 1 in 8 Canadians, struggle with hunger. Year over year, I provide the most current food insecurity statistics, and, unfortunately, this number has skyrocketed since the pandemic began. As big as this number is, we must remember that it is just that - a number. There are real people behind this growing figure: friends, neighbors, children, working moms, veterans, seniors, LGBTQ youth, the African American community (which experiences hunger at twice the rate as their white, non-Latino counterparts). At its core, hunger is a symptom of poverty, and Move For Hunger is one part of a very complex solution.

Equally important to the issue of food insecurity is the issue of food waste - which we are also tackling in major ways. 35% of the food produced in the US goes unsold or uneaten - with the average American family of four wasting $1,500 worth of food each year. Reducing food waste is no easy feat, and Move For Hunger is working to approach it at the source. In 2022 we'll be providing more transportation and cold storage refrigeration resources to farms across the nation. Cold storage solutions will expand farm yields and extend the life of fresh produce - allowing more time to transport it to food banks before it spoils. New partnerships with freight and logistics companies are also increasing our capacity to recover even more food before it goes to waste.

We survived. We rebuilt. And in 2022, we will grow. The need has never been greater, and we are working harder than ever to deliver more food to those who need it most. There will be even more opportunities for YOU to take action in the year ahead. So please make sure you follow us on social media and check out the website for updates!

Thank you so much for continuing to support us through these challenging times. It means the world to us. Here's to a healthy and impactful 2022!

Sincerely,

Adam Lowy, Founder & Executive Director

Women Face Hunger at a Disproportionate Rate

The Equal Rights Amendment in 1972 established legal equality based on sex. However, to this day, inequality based on sex permeates the societal and hierarchical structure of America. Due to the lasting historic imprint left by the lack of women's rights, deep-rooted gender norms, and human-made conflict, women experience hunger at a disproportionate rate worldwide.

1 IN 8 AMERICANS ARE FOOD INSECURE

1 IN 4 NATIVE AMERICANS ARE FOOD INSECURE

Native Americans and Hunger

Historically, Native Americans have been far more likely to experience food insecurity than White Americans, Black Americans, or Hispanic Americans. About one in four Native Americans experiences food insecurity, compared to 1 in 8 Americans overall. Native American families are 400% more likely to report being food insecure, with limited access to sufficient, affordable food.

There are a total of 28 counties in the United States where the majority of the population is Native American, and 18 of those counties are considered high food insecurity counties. A large portion of this stems from above-average unemployment and poverty among tribal communities.

In Canada, food insecurity is even worse for their indigenous population. When living off-reserve, One in three members of the First Nation suffer from food insecurity – more than three times the overall population. For people that live on-reserve, 54% of people are food insecure.

Hunger is a Racial Inequity Issue

With the resurgence of the Black Lives Matter movement in 2020, the spotlight has been put back on racial injustice in the Black community. Throughout history, people of color in the United States have experienced discrimination and maltreatment when it comes to education, employment, housing, healthcare, and mass incarceration, among others. It is through these and other systems that structural racism is maintained as a result of historical actions that continue to be felt today. Because of this, the Black community has dealt with poverty and food insecurity at two times the rate of the overall population of the United States.

There are a variety of factors at play that make food insecurity such a serious issue in the Black community.

Food Insecurity in the LGBTQ+ Community

LGBTQ+ individuals around the world have been oppressed for generations, simply because of who they love or how they express themselves. It is undeniable that the modern world has become far more accepting of the community and its members, but celebratory pride parades and rainbow flags don't change the fact that LGBTQ+ Americans are still facing so many obstacles, including an increased risk of experiencing hunger and homelessness.

The situation is even more dire for the transgender community where according to the most recent U.S. Transgender Survey (USTS), almost a third of the transgender population (29%) was living in poverty. This is compared to 12% of the general population. In addition, 30% of respondents reported being homeless at one point in their lifetime.

SUSTAINABILITY AND FOOD WASTE

At Move For Hunger, we believe that to end hunger, we don't need to produce more food, we just need to get food in the hands of people that need it the most. Case and point -- according to ReFed, 35% of all food produced in the United States goes unsold or uneaten. That's $408 billion worth of food or another way to put it, 2% of the U.S. Gross Domestic Product (GDP). Only a portion of that food gets donated or recycled meaning 108 billion pounds of food ends up in landfills.

Percentage of food produced in the US goes to waste.

The worth of food in the US that is unsold or uneaten.

Pounds of food that ends up in landfills in the United States.

If we were to recover about half of that food, we could feed every hungry person in the United States 3 meals a day, every day.

Not only is the food going to waste, but it's also one of the biggest contributors to greenhouse gas emissions at 4%, and takes up the most space in landfills. The Environmental Protection Agency points out that when organic material gets buried in the dump, it decomposes anaerobically and releases methane, a greenhouse gas 25x more harmful than carbon dioxide. A report from the United Kingdom's Food Waste Recycling Action Plan (WRAP) says that if food scraps were eliminated from landfills, the corresponding reduction in greenhouse gas emissions would be the equivalent of removing 20% of all the cars in the country from the road. In Canada, it's estimated about 20-30% of all food produced in the country goes to waste.

So, what can we all do to help? Stop wasting food at home. 43% of all food waste occurs at home. Some simple steps include: only purchase what you need, use apps like AllRecipes to get recipes with ingredients you already have, buy food in resealable containers or store it in specific ways to have it last longer.

If all else fails, donate your food! We make it easy to set up a food drive or to find a food bank where you can donate your food. We already have all the tools (and food) we need to end hunger. We just need to commit to ending the problem that needs to be solved. Click here to learn more.

Volunteers, like those at Shiseido Corporation, prevented food from going to waste this past fall. They participated in a gleaning activity at America's Grow-A-Row in New Jersey.

The Social Block, a Trinity Property Management apartment community near Mississippi State's campus, enrolled early in 2021 to help cut food waste and collect food when residents move out.

During November, Wayne Moving & Storage took their team out gleaning to rescue apples. This is an annual event for the mover, and they helped rescue over 600 pounds of apples.

FRESH INNOVATION

This past year, Move For Hunger expanded its scope to launch a new initiative into fresh and perishable food. It kicked off in the summer, continued through the end of the year with large transports, and forged new partnerships coast to coast.

Projects included working with Farmlink in California to deliver fresh produce to the Hollywood Food Coalition, working with Last Mile Food Rescue in Cincinnati to transport food to the Freestore Food Bank, partnering with America's Grow-A-Row in New Jersey to move fresh food picked by volunteers to a variety of food banks to the local area, and much, much more.

Access to fresh food is so important because many of those who are food insecure don't have a local grocery store, which can classify the area as a food desert. People residing in rural areas and urban communities with a large minority population have a higher likelihood of living in a food desert. Since fresh, healthy food can be very hard to come by, the residents often rely on cheaper food which is normally not as nutritious and can lead to a variety of health problems.

The Fresh Food Program has made an immediate impact on local communities through Move For Hunger. In total this year, the new initiative transported more than 703,500 pounds of food. On top of that, much of the year was focused on building new relationships that will continue to grow into a fruitful 2022 with several key projects already underway - including cold storage solutions which will allow produce and seafood to be stored and distributed before they perish.

Hering Farm in North Carolina donated 50 acres of land to grow sweet potatoes for The Food Bank of Central and Eastern North Carolina. When the land produced a bumper crop, Move For Hunger enlisted the help of companies like TQL to transport 96,936 pounds of potatoes from the farm to the food bank.

Partnering with America's Grow-A-Row this year, Lowy's Moving Services made regular weekly trips to the farm, loaded up with multiple pallets of farm fresh gleaned food, and delivered a total of 33,000 pounds to multiple hunger relief agencies in the area.

When Farmlink identified an opportunity to transport fresh produce to the Hollywood Food Coalition in Los Angeles, the REAL Rock'n'Roll Movers, in the middle of an exceptionally busy season, made time to make several transports happen. They transported celery, watermelon, tomatoes, cantaloupe, zucchini, and more.

In preparation for Thanksgiving, Move For Hunger coordinated with the ASAP Movers team in San Luis Obispo, CA assisting the Food Bank Coalition of San Luis Obispo County with eight deliveries over three weeks, transporting almost 9,000 pounds of turkeys to agencies for distribution.

Star International Movers responded to our call in October when the Northern Virginia Food Rescue had an opportunity to rescue 2,460 pounds of apples for hunger relief. These apples were distributed to those in need in the community.

When New York City's Vegandale Festival had fresh food left over from their event in September, we coordinated with Dumbo Moving to bring this nutritious food to a local Brooklyn church who had volunteers, tables, and hungry community residents ready to gratefully receive it.

MULTIFAMILY PROGRAM

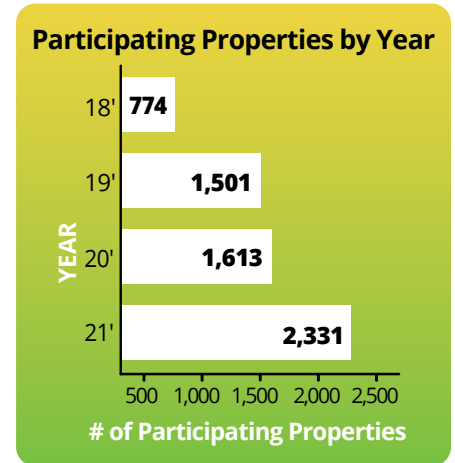

2021 has been the most impactful year yet for the Multifamily Program. Residents, on-site teams, and leadership alike have stepped up to the challenge to fight hunger and have collected almost DOUBLE the amount of meals from 2020 to 2021. The network continues to grow larger than ever before – over 2,000 properties. Click here to get your property involved and to give back to your community!

Tippet Richardson employees volunteer their weekend to host a Fill-A-Truck Food Drive

Giving back to our local community is a concept that we hold dear at Tippet-Richardson Moving & Storage, so partnering with Move For Hunger has always been a no-brainer for us. Move For Hunger's concept of harnessing moving and relocation companies to collect donations of unwanted food during the moving process was a stroke of genius. Move For Hunger has united moving companies across North America in the fight against hunger and we couldn't be prouder of being a part of that.

Graebel leadership moved alongside their staff and came together as one company aligned with fighting hunger and food waste.

Move 2 Fight Hunger Presented By Gex Pro

New to the Move For Hunger network, Gexpro Services wanted their employees to give back in a meaningful way. 43 employees helped to provide 16,000 meals through their participation in their own Move 2 Fight Hunger Challenge. More than 1,100 activities were logged as the employees came together to fight hunger.

The challenge helped employees explore new ways to get fit, have fun, and fight hunger!

This group of hunger fighting heroes moved together to help reach their goals.

CORPORATE SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

Many of our supporters this year held awareness events to engage their clients, customers, and employees.

Employees from various organizations such as Sodexo, SIRVA, and Shiseido learned just how difficult it is to live on SNAP benefits (also known as the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program) by creating a weekly meal planner using the SNAP budget.

Companies, like Twilio, encourage employee volunteerism through dedicated days of giving back by providing opportunities for employees to do good.

Our virtual Sip For Hunger event brings a winery experience into everyone's home. This private wine tasting uses a real sommelier with an actual tour of a vineyard while tying in a charitable twist to the event. Our friends at CarsArrive were the first to host this event and engaged their VIP clients in this small and intimate event.

Companies like Oncue, wanted to highlight their charitable giving to every customer and dedicated a percentage of every sale made this year back to Move For Hunger.

What has turned into an annual golf tournament, has allowed Move For Hunger to provide thousands of meals through the generosity of the Knights of the Greentable Corporation, hosted through the Aztec Corporation.

Bell Partners wanted to put a charitable twist on their internal partners meeting by hosting an ArcANtecture event to benefit Move For Hunger.

Our virtual trivia events give members within our network the opportunity to participate in a fun and competitive game, while also highlighting the issues of food insecurity and food waste. Members of CMSA, Updater, and LogMeln were among some of our corporate supporters this year to participate in our virtual trivia events.

Move For Hunger worked alongside our food bank partners to support volunteer opportunities for our supporters, like with IOR Global Services who spent the day volunteering at the Northern Illinois Food Bank.

Kastle continued to support Move For Hunger through various employee initiatives including our Front Porch Food Drive and Season of Giving Food Drive. The food collected helped their local communities.

TRUCK PULLS

While Truck Pulls are Move For Hunger's signature fundraising event, the Covid-19 pandemic unfortunately, once again, prevented us from having any large, public, in-person truck pulls in 2021. We are hopeful for a return of the truck pulls in 2022 and have several already in the works. If you are interested in hosting your own truck pull in your local city to see which team can pull a moving truck 100 feet in the fastest time and be named Truck Pull Champion, please reach out to us. We'd love to make this happen in 2022!

We were able to host one in-person truck pull this year, however, in conjunction with The Wheaton Group's 66th Annual Partnership Conference. Sixteen teams competed to be named The Wheaton Group Truck Pull Champion in October in Nashville, Tennessee. Olympia Moving and Storage and their team was named the winner for the quickest pull with a time of 20.63 seconds.

So many Wheaton, Bekins, Stevens and Arpin agents at our 2021 partnership conference said it was the best they've ever been to that we might have to host a truck pull more often! Everyone at The Wheaton Group was thrilled to bring in $20,000 through our very first truck pull. Not only did we entertain our agents with a soundtrack from DJ Amy Darling, branded cornhole boards, and delicious food trucks, but we were also able to donate $10,000 to Move For Hunger.

- Jaymie Shook, The Wheaton Group

TEAM MOVE FOR HUNGER

Following a year of quarantine and cancellations, it's been a slow return for our Team Move For Hunger this year. But we are beyond excited to celebrate that we were able to participate in several marathons and other endurance events in 2021! This year, through the dedication of our participants, we were able to provide more than 50,000 meals. Events like Napa to Sonoma in California and Grandma's Marathon in Minnesota allowed our team to make an impact this year. We look forward to 2022 for a more full return of Team Move For Hunger. Learn more about the program and join Team Move For Hunger to turn your miles into meals!

Aaron had the finish line in sight after completing 26.2 miles at the Grandma's Marathon weekend. This was the first event for our Team after a year of endurance sports cancellations.

Nathan and Isabella were all smiles after completing the San Francisco Marathon as a part of Team Move For Hunger. 26.2 miles is no joke, but knowing they provided meals with every step, made it all worth it.

Members of Team Paul Hansen and Mover's Choice celebrated their accomplishments at the Napa to Sonoma Wine Country Half Marathon and Rose 5k weekend. This was the last event of the year for Team Move For Hunger.

MOVE 2 FIGHT HUNGER CHALLENGE

The Move 2 Fight Hunger Challenge, sponsored by CarsArrive Auto Relocation, brought together nearly 300 members of the Move For Hunger network in June. Together, these hunger fighting heroes got fit, had fun, and fought hunger by encouraging physical activity and wellness while directly translating it into philanthropy and meals for those in need. Twenty seven teams completed 5,421 activities to reach our collective goal of providing 50,000 meals during the month. Participants were encouraged to get out and MOVE by completing a variety of activities including, running, walking, reading, and gardening. All activities were tracked using a fitness platform and leaderboards, and sweaty selfies kept everyone motivated throughout the month. Participants received a commemorative medal, event T-shirt, and certificate for their efforts. Most importantly, the event provided 50,000 meals to those in need.

Employees at RentPath fully embraced the Move 2 Fight Hunger Challenge by “moving” in fun and creative ways

Carly from Fincor Construction was all smiles after a run during our Move 2 Fight Hunger Challenge.

Employees at Mover Specialty Services flexed their muscles while turning their activities into meals.

Team SuiteAmerica took a minute to show us their ‘sweaty selfies’ after a workout during the challenge.

A member of Team International Association of Movers completed a half Ironman to show her support during the challenge.

Team Weichert got their families involved to help us provide meals and claim their top spot in the challenge.

A Spot on The Today Show

The year started with one of the biggest publicity hits Move For Hunger has ever received: a spot on the TODAY show. The 4-minute segment shared the humble beginnings of Move For Hunger, the organization's growth over the past 12 years, and shared more information about the current state of hunger in America. The clip has proven to be a fantastic showpiece for our organization, and one we use to help introduce ourselves to new partners and to play at conferences.

Hunger In America Summit

In April, Move For Hunger curated a virtual forum to facilitate a dialogue on food scarcity and insecurity in the first Hunger in America Summit - 'How the Nation's Leading Organizations are Meeting the Need Post-Pandemic'. Top experts and panelists from the World Food Program USA, the Houston Food Bank, The Food Dignity Project, and The Albertsons Company Foundation discussed the current state of hunger in America, and equitable and sustainable solutions to re-build post-pandemic.

Fox 32 Chicago: Naperville students host a food drive with Move For Hunger

On the 1 year anniversary, Fox 19 Chicago spotlighted our very first Front Porch Food Drive hosted by Lucy Kinney in their town of Naperville, Illinois that collected 1,500 meals. The food collected was enough to provide more than 1,250 meals.

The Mesa Tribune: Just-In Time moving company helps local food bank

The Mesa Tribune featured one of our top movers, Just-In Time Moving & Storage as they hit the 1,000,000 pound milestone for 2021. Just-In Time has been an invaluable resource for the United Food Bank since the start of the pandemic by transporting food weekly.

Parent Map: Free Entry to the Washington State Fair with Canned Food Donation

Parent Map covered the food drive at the Western Washington State Fair. Attendees could get free admission on opening day for donating food. Apex Moving & Storage picked up the food and transported the 20,000 meals to the Puyallup Food Bank.

Social Media Mentions

Following the TODAY Show spot, Move For Hunger received a few notable and prominent social media features including:

INTERNSHIPS

Move For Hunger offers a variety of internships to college students, recent grads, and people looking to transition their career into the nonprofit sector. It's the perfect opportunity to get hands-on experience and get a look under the hood with a successful nonprofit organization. This year, Move For Hunger had in-person and remote internships with our programming team, marketing team, Multifamily team, and development team. Their contributions made sure food pickups were happening on time, they conducted in-depth research on how women experience hunger at a disproportionate rate, helped develop new ways to host a virtual fundraiser, and more. We're extremely grateful for the 21 interns this year and couldn't have had a successful year without them. Learn more about the program!

FELLOWSHIPS

Move For Hunger's Fellowship program allows young people, particularly those that might live in a low income or underserved community, to earn a paid stipend while gaining crucial hands-on learning experience often acquired in unpaid internship settings. We know that there are highly qualified candidates who cannot apply for our traditional internship program because they would not be able to accept an unpaid position, but thanks to generous grants from our partners, we are able to compensate our fellow. We view this fellowship as an investment in communities across the US, but it is also an investment in the future of the anti-hunger movement as a whole.

This year's fellow, Chelsea Zamot, was referred to us by our food pantry partner in Red Bank, NJ. She was an excellent addition to our team and made significant contributions during her time with us. Chelsea shared her thoughts on the experience, "Being a fellow at Move For Hunger was truly a fun learning experience. I gained knowledge in many different aspects regarding how a nonprofit organization is managed. I was allowed to shift between departments to learn the background and importance of each one and I was able to choose which department I felt I would gain the most experience in. I was included in team meetings, my interaction was highly encouraged and my input was valued. I was able to work and gain hands-on experience with grant writing, development, advocacy, and programming. I enjoyed recruiting, engaging properties, and fundraising. What I learned during my fellowship will help me with my future public health goals because I desire to work in a nonprofit environment." Click here for more information!

VOLUNTEERS

Move For Hunger wouldn't be complete without our volunteers. They are an essential part of the operation and keep us moving helping with a variety of tasks, including putting together our Welcome Kits for new properties and movers within our network. Become a volunteer today!

In August, Marina, Robin, and Annette helped put together Welcome Kits for our growing Multifamily Program in our office.

Throughout the year, Mr. Rosner's class from Raritan High School in Hazlet, New Jersey came to our office to help Move For Hunger out with a variety of projects.

The OceanFirst Foundation has a long history of supporting Move For Hunger including having some of their "Wavemakers", Sall and Jaqueline, help out and put together Welcome Kits in our office.

GRANTS

Because of the generous support from these foundations and charitable organizations, Move For Hunger is able to continue to provide meals for those in need across North America through our hunger relief and food waste reduction programs. Learn more about our hunger fighting heroes.

COMMITTEES

We have amazing volunteers that support our mission to end hunger and food waste by being a part of our Food CORT, Mover Action Committee, and Corporate Action Network. This year, we were able to add a new committee to help support our Multifamily growth with our CARES Committee. Each dedicated member of our committees serves as an important ambassador for Move For Hunger and works to help engage their companies and communities through food drives and fundraisers, expand Move For Hunger and our impact through their professional networks, and helps spread awareness of the hunger and food waste crisis. Our committee members serve as valuable extensions of the Move For Hunger staff, and we couldn't continue to further our mission without them.

Members of our Corporate Action Network came together at the WERC Architecture event. CAN members pictured here include Erin Almand, Lisa Fontana, and Ben Cross with Kara Sendell from Move For Hunger.

Our CARES Committee supports Move For Hunger at the National Apartment Association's annual conference. Our CARES network helped provide over 65,000 meals to their local communities by engaging their properties, suppliers, and corporate teams in Food Drives.

Ingrid Piroaska and her team at Quality Move Management participated in Move For Hunger's 10 Box Challenge campaign this summer. Their branches collected 1,811 lbs. during the food drive.
