A Message from the Executive Director

Dear Friends,

Where does the time go?

Move For Hunger will celebrate its 10th anniversary this year, and we have come a long, long way since our modest beginnings. It started with an impromptu family brainstorm. My brother, Max, doodled the logo on a napkin. When I was sitting alone in my dad's conference room with my college laptop and a yellow legal pad, I could only hope to one day have an entire office and be surrounded by the best team anyone could ever ask for. Yet, here we are. The successes you will read about in the following pages are, in many respects, the culmination of a decade's work.

In 2018, we organized nearly 1,000 food drives, which is more than we ever have in a single year. The runners and walkers who turned their miles into meals with Team Move For Hunger raised $82,760, also a new record. And our network of multi-family apartment communities expanded from 129 properties to 700, a 442% increase.

Each of those accomplishments are a product of the foundation we have been building since 2009. We would not have been able reach any of those milestones without the moving companies who believed in our cause from day one. Move For Hunger could not have become the organization it is today without the partners who have provided us the support we needed to grow the network, introduce new programs, and scale our operations.

We can't discuss our progress, however, without acknowledging that hunger and food waste are still as prevalent as they have ever been. There are still more Americans facing hunger today than there were before the Great Recession. Despite all of the attention our food waste epidemic has received, we are still throwing away 40% of the food we produce every year.

It would be impossible to solve these problems without collaboration. Fortunately, that is something we do extremely well. Move For Hunger is fostering community partnerships that will continue to grow organically for years to come. We are changing the way entire industries do business. We are challenging millions of people to confront the issues and providing them with an opportunity to do something about it. And, collectively, day-by-day, we are creating a more sustainable future.

Move For Hunger may have started at my desk, but it has always been about you. I am so proud of what we have accomplished together, but our focus must remain on the road ahead. Although we have a lot of momentum heading into 2019, that alone won't carry us where we need to go. It's time for us to take that next step. It's time to move forward.

Thank you,

Adam Lowy
Executive Director

Adam presented our 2017 Mover of the Year Award to Imlach & Collins Brothers at this year's AMSA Conference.

Adam was chosen to give the keynote address at the Russ Berrie Making A Difference Awards Ceremony in May.

Adam gave a presentation at the Midwest Food Recovery Summit in Des Moines, IA in August.

Why We Fight Hunger

More than 41 million Americans are food insecure. The loss of a job, an illness, or an unexpected rent hike could be catastrophic for people who are living paycheck to paycheck. And the impact of such widespread hunger extends far beyond individual households.

For example, food insecurity among children has been linked to poor academic performance, and the long-term consequences of sending kids to class hungry are substantial. Children who experience food insecurity in kindergarten fall behind and tend to stay behind.

DIABETES
CO-PAY
HEALTHCARE
CHRONIC STRESS

People who are hungry are also 2.9x more likely to be in poor health, are more susceptible to chronic conditions like diabetes, and have much higher rates of obesity. Low-income households are more likely to be uninsured and have to pay for the extraordinary costs of healthcare out of their own pockets, which drives them even deeper into poverty.

If millions of children can't learn because they haven't eaten breakfast, we are squandering the future of the next generation. If we consign illness onto an entire class of people, we are denying them their opportunity to succeed. Hunger is not simply an obstacle to be overcome, it is a formidable barrier to a person's, and, by extension, our country's prosperity.

We fight hunger because we believe everyone should have an equal opportunity to reach their full potential.

Food Waste & Rescue

It's hard to believe that we could waste 40% of the food we produce while 41 million Americans face hunger every day. Perfectly good food is being wasted at every level of the supply chain: on the farm, during distribution, at the store, and in our homes.

In addition to the enormous humanitarian cost, our food waste epidemic also has profound economic and environmental consequences. American consumers, businesses, and farms are spending $218 billion each year on food that is never eaten. And the resources that we expend to grow, process, and dispose of that food is leaving behind a massive carbon footprint.

Food waste is a massive problem, and that is why Move For Hunger is always searching for new opportunities to make an impact beyond our traditional programs. In 2018, we rescued hundreds of thousands of pounds of food and beverages from marathons, triathlons, and other endurance events all across the United States. We also partnered with Philabundance on a gleaning program that provided residents in Camden, NJ with more than 14,000 lbs. of fresh-picked New Jersey corn.

In the Media

On the average day, there are no cameras, no microphones, no reporters. Our network recorded thousands of acts of generosity this year - most with little or no fanfare. But, sometimes, the important work we do draws an audience. This year, Move For Hunger was mentioned in the media more than 2,800 times. Here's a look at some of the headlines we made in 2018.

Internships

Move For Hunger is committed to creating an internship program that provides students, recent graduates, and life long learners with an introduction to the practical components of the non-profit industry. We believe that by empowering our interns, we can provide them with a valuable experience that will provide them with the skills they need to actualize their career goals.

In 2018, our Programming Interns helped manage our ever-expanding network of relocation companies. Our New Media Interns researched and wrote outstanding content for our brand new About Hunger page. Did you watch our Life of a Can and Food Drive Explainer videos? Those wouldn't have been possible without our incredibly talented Graphic Design, Videography & Animation Interns. And, of course, our indispensable team of Events Interns played an essential role in helping us organize a record number of food drives this year.

Our Fall Interns helped us organize 451 food drives from September-December.

34 # of Interns IN 2018

“Interning at Move For Hunger ignited a passion for fundraising and event planning while nurturing my pre-existing passion for public health. Everyone was extremely easy to talk to and I never felt silly speaking up or asking a question. I left feeling more confident in myself and have a clearer picture of the next steps in my future career. I could have not asked for a better experience!”

- Sarah Meade, Summer 2018

Fellowship

We know that there are highly-qualified candidates in our community who do not even apply to our traditional internship program because they would not be able to accept an unpaid position. The Move For Hunger Fellowship Program was designed to address that problem and provide a student from New Jersey with an opportunity to gain experience in every aspect of our organization. Thanks to grants from New Jersey Natural Gas, the OceanFirst Foundation, The Russ Berrie Foundation, and Gannett, we were able to launch the program this year, and we welcomed our first fellow to the team in June.

A generous donation from the OceanFirst Foundation helped make our Fellowship Program a reality.

David Rivera is from Ocean Grove, NJ and is currently pursuing his Associate's Degree at Brookdale Community College. After completing a 2-week rotation with each of our 8 departments, David chose to spend the remaining 8 weeks of his Fellowship working with our Events and Communications teams.

We view this Fellowship as an investment in our community and in the future of the anti-hunger movement. It is important to give people who are underprivileged or underrepresented a chance to lend their voice to the conversation. We believe this fellowship will both empower and open doors for potential leaders.

David Rivera was named Move For Hunger's first Fellow.

“My fellowship at Move for Hunger allowed me to learn the ins and outs of a non-profit and to gain work experience while earning a stipend to help pay for my college expenses. The staff was kind and helpful and that made the office a comfortable place to be. Programs like this are crucial for introducing students to professional environments and providing them with the skills they'll need to succeed. I am honored to be the first fellow and I would encourage anyone to apply as a stepping stone for their career.”

#PULLFORHUNGER

Truck Pulls are Move For Hunger's signature fundraising event. In 2018, we organized 5 truck pulls and raised more than $67,000 combined!

What is a Truck Pull, exactly? Here's the deal: we tie a big rope to a moving truck and teams of 5-10 people compete to see who can pull it 100 feet in the fastest time. Trust us, it's as much fun as it sounds! More importantly, Truck Pulls are a great way to support our cause AND raise awareness about hunger and food waste in your community.

Gentle Giant Moving Company was victorious and more than $17,000 was donated and at this year's AMSA Truck Pull.

Crown Relocations of New York raised $10,500 at the first New Jersey Truck Pull in August.
